DIABLO PUBLICATIONS TAKES HOME THREE MAGGIES

Walnut Creek, CA, May 4, 2007 -- The Western Publications Association (WPA) announced the 2007 winners of the 56th Annual Maggie Awards on Friday, April 27, the most prestigious magazine publishing awards in the western United States. Known as “the Oscars of the magazine industry,” the Maggies honor the best in magazine and electronic publishing for both consumer and trade publications.

Diablo magazine was a finalist in eight categories and took home two awards. Diablo magazine received Best Special Theme Issue consumer for the November food issue and Best Single Editorial Illustration for “Are Our Schools Flunking Sex Ed?” This brings Diablo magazine’s Maggie awards total to 19.

Napa Sonoma magazine once again received Best Visitor’s Guides/Consumer for the spring/summer issue. Napa Sonoma magazine also won this award in 2003, 2004, and 2005.

“Receiving these awards is a demonstration to our hard working staff’s talent, ingenuity, and continued commitment to excellence,” said Barney Fonzi, group publisher for Diablo Publications.

DGP, the custom publishing division of Diablo Publications, also took home a Maggie for *Next Best Corporate or In-House category.
